

ABSTRACT

A method, system, and software for mapping and displaying process objects at different levels of abstraction includes correlating business level objects to application level objects. Source data is associated with indications for both the relevant business level objects and the application level objects and stored in a database. The stored data is displayed associated with both the business level objects and the application level objects.